

This unit I wrote an argument-driven research paper. I chose to pursue a different topic. In this essay I argued how code switching is influencing people at work by creating more stress for them and pushing them away from being themselves. The purpose of this was to try to make people feel comfortable with who they are and not putting a mask to look better in the eye of other people. My audience was people of different groups like LGBTQ is one of them where they have to be someone else at work and face a lot of stress. My essay serves as good evidence for my ability to draw on sources and construct persuasive arguments.
